The Massachusetts Bar Association is presenting its 19th Annual In-House Counsel Conference, which will focus this year on the theme of "Avoiding Traps for the Unwary." This virtual conference will be held live on a remote platform to allow for interactive discussions and audience questions. The program will present information on current topics of significant concern to in-house and outside counsel, featuring:

- A keynote address from Rachael Rollins, Suffolk County district attorney and nominee for U.S. attorney for the District of Massachusetts.
- A panel discussion regarding the development and use of industry standards, opinions and guidance documents to determine legal obligations, which will include panelists Brian C. O'Donnell, assistant attorney general, Office of the Massachusetts Attorney General Fair Labor Division; and Stephen L. Grimes, managing partner and principal consultant, Strategic Healthcare Technology Associates LLC.
- A panel discussion regarding current cybersecurity and data privacy issues, which will include panelists Michael J. Corby, PMP, CISSP, CCP, CBCP, M. Corby & Associates Inc.; Stephanie Helm, director of the MassCyberCenter; and Jenny Hedderman, Esq., state risk counsel, Comptroller of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. This panel will discuss ransomware (to pay or not to pay), implementation of a cybersecurity safety net and other topics of current interest to in-house counsel.
- A panel discussion led by Robert Kilroy of Mirick O'Connell and Todd M. Torres, associate general counsel at UMass Memorial Health Care, regarding vaccine mandates and other pandemic-related employment issues.
- A lightning round presentation regarding the new federal Corporate Transparency Act.

This webinar will be hosted using Zoom. Registration is required by 10 a.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 26, to participate in this program. After you register with the MBA, look for an email from MassBar Education with the Webinar ID and Password.
